Featured visual artists for the festival included: Kris Kuksi, one of the most highly regarded artists in the contemporary surreal/visionary movement, whose work is in the collection of Chris Weitz, Director of the new movie, The Golden Compass, based upon Philip Pullman's book and grounded in John Milton's Paradise Lost. Also included were Rich Buckler, an American comic book artist best known for his work on Marvel Comics' The Fantastic Four in the mid-1970's, who produced a portrait of John Milton for the 21st century; Bienvenido Bones Banez, a Filipino surrealist whose work is based on his "666 World View;" and Olek, with her conceptual, cutting edge fashion.

The contemporary art and performances during the festival were couched amid historical artifacts related to John Milton and his period. Historical exhibits included Charles Lamb's copy of first illustrated 1691 edition of Paradise Lost, Lady Pomfret's copy of the first illustrated edition (c. 1688) of Paradise Lost. Madam Pomfret was a noble 18th century British woman of great learning, and the Lady of the Bedchamber of Queen Caroline.

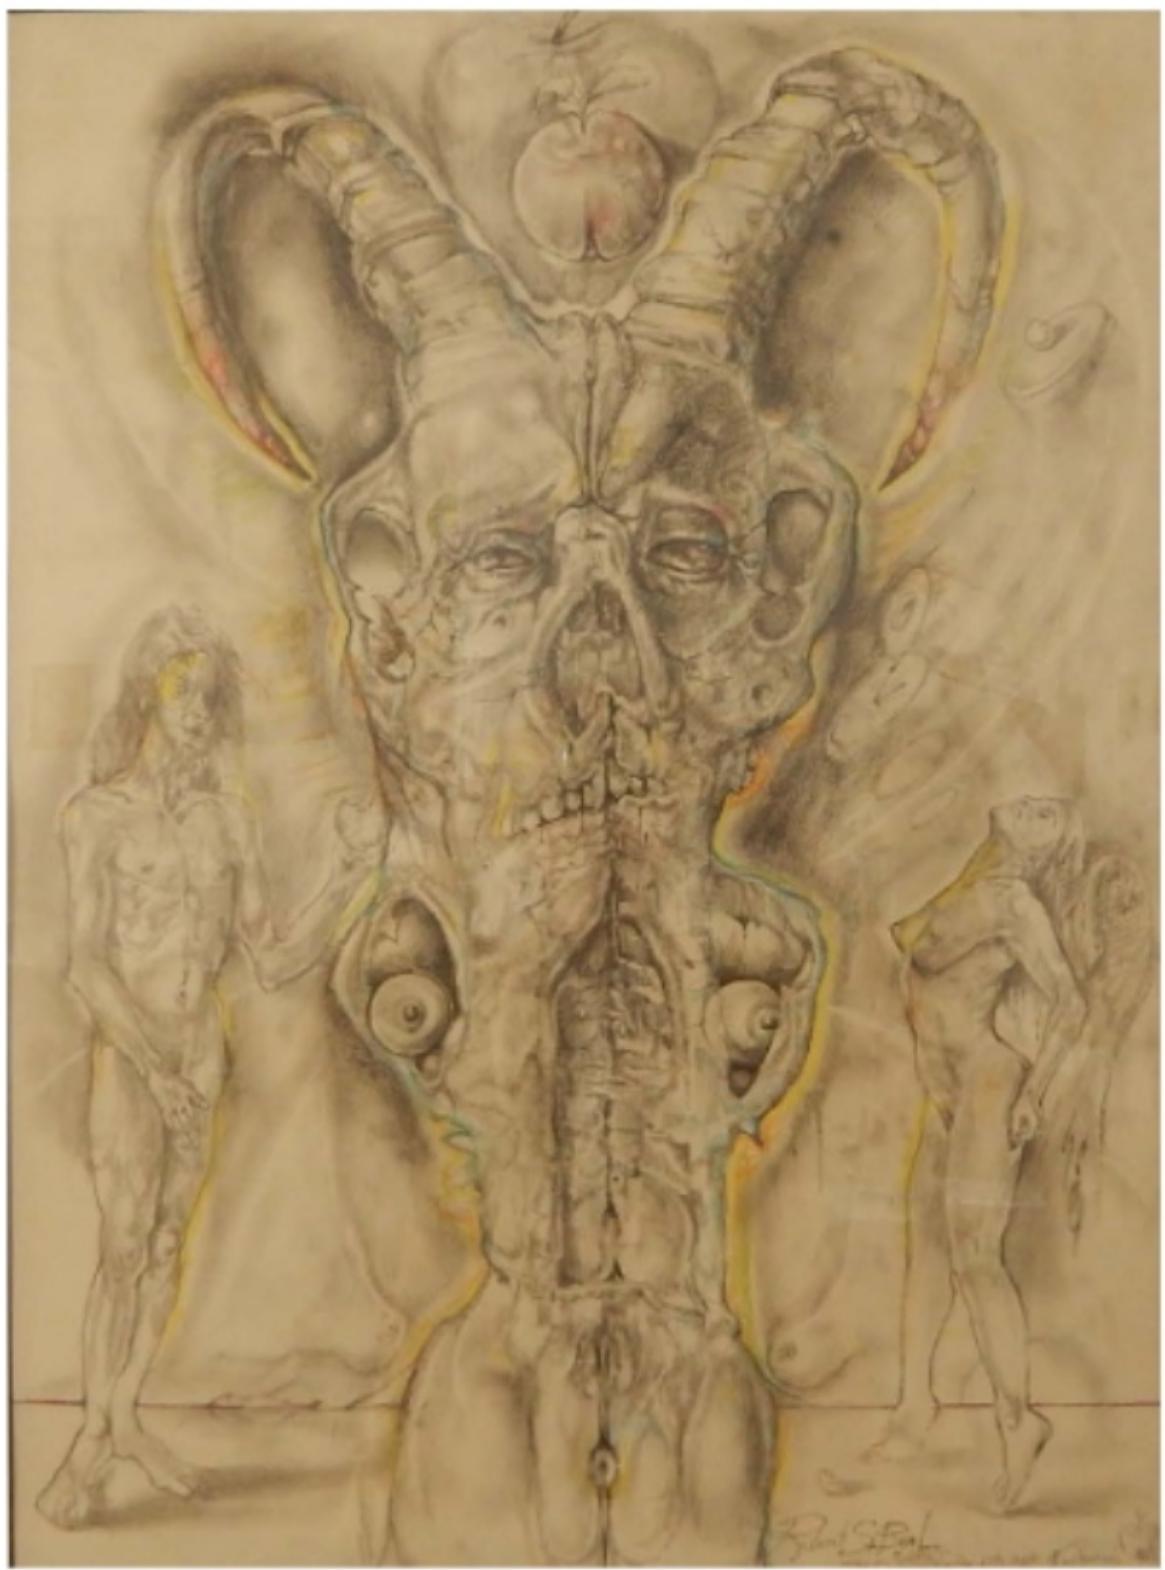

Other historical artifacts included a 17th century handwritten Moroccan Torah fragment, the complete Book of Genesis (the 1st book out of the 5 books of Moses).

To honor the British peoples, Royal artifacts from the reigns of Queen Victoria and King Edward VIII (Duke of Windsor) were also displayed.

In many cultures and societies, the fear of new art forms and/or traditional Surrealist forms prevents those forms from being shown - Art is seen as a threat to the Status Quo and 'established' pedagogues. While the Renaissance of Fantastical, Surrealist and Visionary Art seems to continue and advance, far beyond Breton's own expectations, onto a worldwide stage, with numerous group and individual shows in New York, etc., many rural mid and midwest geographical areas in America, refuse to accept or show Surrealism. The greatest of those artists have simply been ignored, unless they, also, CONFORM, to the status of what 'surrealism' is supposed to represent, according to the percepts of gallery representation and home decor.

"Without a doubt, Terrance Lindall is the foremost illustrator of Paradise Lost in our age, comparable to other great illustrators through the ages, and someone who has achieved a place of high stature for all time." Robert J. Wickenheiser, 19th President of St. Bonaventure University

Synopsis and Illustrations in Folio Edition by Terrance Lindall of
Paradise Lost by John Milton

Commentary by Robert J. Wickenheiser, Ph. D.

Without a doubt, Terrance Lindall is the foremost illustrator of Paradise Lost in our age, comparable to other great illustrators through the ages, and someone who has achieved a place of high stature for all time.

Throughout almost four centuries of illustrating Milton's Paradise Lost, no one has devoted his or her life, artistic talents and skills and the keenness of the illustrator's eye more fully and few as completely as Terrance Lindall has done in bringing to life Milton's great epic. He has also devoted his brilliant mind to studying Milton, his philosophy, and his theology in order to know as fully as possible the great poet to whom he has devoted his adult life and to whose great epic he has devoted the keenness of his artistic eye in order to bring that great epic alive in new ways in a new age and for newer ages still to come.

From virtually the outset Milton has been appreciated as the poet of poets. It was John Dryden who said it first and best about Milton shortly after Milton died in 1674:

Three Poets in three distant Ages born —
Greece, Italy and England did adorn.
The First in loftiness of thought Surpass'd;
The Next in Majesty: in both the Last.
The force of Nature could no further goe;
To make a Third she joyn'd the Former two.

Milton's use of unrhymed iambic pentameter verse in a manner never used before raises the lofty goals of his epic to a level never before achieved in the English language. Moreover, the poet who said at age 10 that he intended to write an epic which will do for Milton's great epic. This painting will only be produced as a print for the Elephant Folio and will not be reproduced for collectors as a signed print in any other format.

And while Lindall may now think that he has finished his work with Milton, he hasn't, because Milton lives within Lindall in a special way, as surely as Lindall remains dedicated to bringing Milton alive to new generations in fresh and vibrant new ways, doing the same for countless generations in centuries to come.

In his folio edition and the illustrations in it, Terrance Lindall shows the influence by certain great master illustrators of Paradise Lost through the centuries before him, especially with the inclusion of richly illustrated margins for each color illustration, the margins colored in 23.75 carat gilt and consisting of brightly colored details drawn from the epic in order to advance the meaning of the given illustration. Moreover, again in the tradition of certain great master illustrators of Milton's Paradise Lost through the centuries, historiated initials, in imitation of the initial letter in an illuminated manuscript, each in rich gilt and bright colors, are used as the first initial of a section and decorated with designs representing scenes from the text, in order to heighten the intensity of the cumulatively related details in each component part: illustration, border, and historiated initial.

The illustrated borders in the elephant folio are complete paintings in themselves. Although the border art focuses principally on elements of design, they also sometimes tell stories or make commentary about what is illustrated in the featured central painting. The borders likewise pay tribute to both humanity's great achievements, such as music, dance and architecture, as well as tribute to those individuals and institutions and friends who have had important influences on Lindall's ideas, or who have shown substantial support or affinity. For example, the Filipino surrealist artist Bienvenido "Bones" Banez, Jr., discovered Lindall's repertoire during the world renowned "Brave Destiny" exhibit in 2003, an exhibit to which Bienvenido had been invited to display one of his works. Thereafter, a friendship and mutual admiration between the two great artists grew, to the benefit of each.

Bienvenido communicated to Lindall the idea of how "Satan brings color to the world." Lindall thought the idea to be an insightful and original "affinity," and so in the elephant folio plate, "Pandemonium," which is a tribute to art, architecture, construction, sculpture, painting, and the like, he especially honors the Filipino surrealist artist by placing Bienvenido's name on the artist's palette at the very top of the border, the palette in flaming colors.

Like the great illustrators of Milton's Paradise Lost before him, Lindall uses many and various techniques and styles to bring Milton's great epic alive. As with Medina, e.g., in the first illustrated edition of Paradise Lost in 1688, Lindall has mastered how to use the synopsized scenic effect to focus our attention on an important moment in the epic while

This drawing by Ben is truly wonderful! Glorious Satan leaps for joy at Ada being seduced! This is by my colleague Bienvenido Boces Banex, Jr. It was Yuko Ni Foundation for the Milton collection. Utterly fantastic. It captures precisely, I call his art "Floro Electric." Notice that Adam & Eve are now being entwined in flames of Hell and snakes. A great conceptual point!!!! The Art of Bienvenido Bones Banez
Artist & Philosopher Friend of Terrance
By Terrance Lindall

The Seraphim שְׂרָפִים in a particular plate of the Elephant Folio of my Paradise Lost have paint brushes in one hand and flames in the other. They are painting with fire. Fire, the tools of Satan in hell, is the creative force of the universe. From the first explosion of the big bang there have been worlds created out of magnificent expanding fire. God wrote the Ten Commandments with His finger in fire. I was thinking of Bienvenido Bones Banez when I painted that. He has been an artistic and intellectual colleague of mine for several years now. Bienvenido's style I call "Fiero Electric" because he recognizes that the divine principle of creation is fire and color, and "Fiero Electric" because of Bien's striking juxtaposition of primary colors. Satanic color!

One of Bien's many remarkable ideas is that "Satan gives color to the world." Indeed, what a dreary world if everything were nice, sweet, and beautiful. We would soon go insane. Man struggles and finds meaning in the struggles. He writes operas and stories about the struggles of love, treachery and war and paints pictures of it. Do we not find Satan's struggle in Paradise Lost more colorful than anything in Paradise Regained. Yes, Satan excites our imagination...he causes many of our struggles and on so doing gives color to the world! And there is no greater artist than Bien in the history of the world to capture this idea.

On display at the WAH Center is a major painting that was only recently shipped to the United States. It is 6 by 8 feet! It came rolled up and had to re-stretched for this exhibit. Having been rolled up it now requires relining by a professional conservator. It is a work of supreme genius that needs to be saved for future generations to wonder at.

The major fiery Satanic figure has outstretched arms like Matthias Grunewald's masterpiece of crucified Christ in the Isenheim Altarpiece. In fact there is a small pale figure of Christ with a cross between his legs on this back of Satan and a church on the back of Satan's head. I know that Bien believes the Christian church and all major religions have been coopted by Satan for his purposes. The ribs of Satan become two horns and a mouth opens with fangs that shoot lightening. Around the hole in the fabric of the universe though which Satan is manifested into our world are seen myriad worshipers and idolaters swimming in a blue circle and under Satan's arms of Power and Dominion radiate the human tribulation of Bien's 666 world Surreal Armageddon.

BIENVENIDO BONES BANEZ' WORLD

By Carlotta Abellana-de Pio

Bienvenido Bones Banez has always been earnest about his art even while a student in the local School of Fines in Davao City, Island of Mindanao, Philippines. He painted big canvasses where he executed in beautiful vibrant color, creations and explorations of the inner realities of his young and curious mind. Snakes and the dark side made many appearances in his compositions. He used mostly somber and low pitched colors. As a student he simply followed the classic use of tonal coloring, using the primary triadic scheme and smooth surfaces. Brush work was not given much importance then. Bones Banez was preoccupied mostly with showing his story as strongly and most visually effective through the sheer size of his shocking and creative detailing of snakes, critters, human skeletons and other bioforms. This was his experimental and tentative explorations into a vision of a world he was starting to sense in his inner being. The rhythm of the internal music in his paintings was new world and very spiritual.

Spiritually, he's been fascinated and attracted to the idea and the realm of the 666, the final Armageddon. This sense of his spirituality has resonated very strongly in his works then and now, as he is maturing in his art. This strong emotional fervor of his belief has propelled Bones Banez to walk more firmly into the world of surrealism, the world of mysticism, the world of the transcendent, the world of the mysterious, the "other" world realities. His visions are all at once religious and mundane at the same time, and always his presentations of these visions have harmonies of line and color that bring the "other" realm into our own realities, our own world of experiences clearly, enthusiastically, and absolutely.

His prismatic use of color, juxtaposing each in short linear patterns, creates the picture of a vibrant and dynamic field of visual language making his work speak with a depth of emotion and spirit albeit dark, even as his colors are brilliant and fresh.

His stories come alive speaking of and about a land and a people from across the oceans. A people whose culture and traditions he has not thoroughly and consciously assimilated into his own life. Yet, Bones Banez' works has deeply been impacted by this powerful presence in the societal psyche of the whole populace where Bones Banez grew immersed in this pervasive underlying currents of consciousness subliminally through out his young life in Davao City, Mindanao, Philippines. No wonder his surrealism strongly reflects the color, rhythm and mind of these earthly, mysterious culture and tradition of a people that walks comfortably well in both the realm of the spirits and the sacred; and the mundane and the profane.

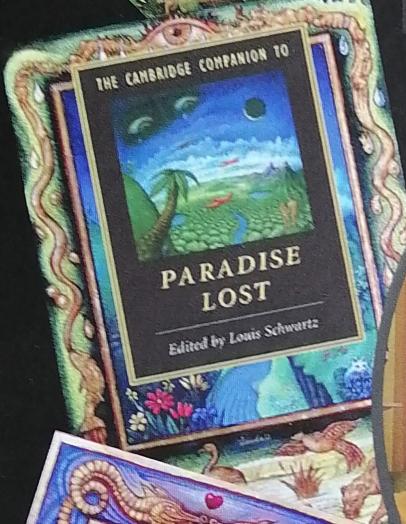

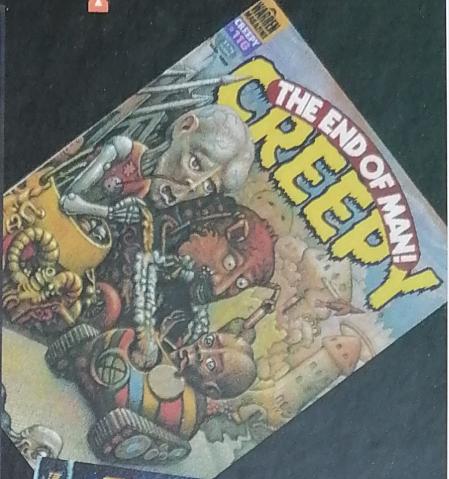

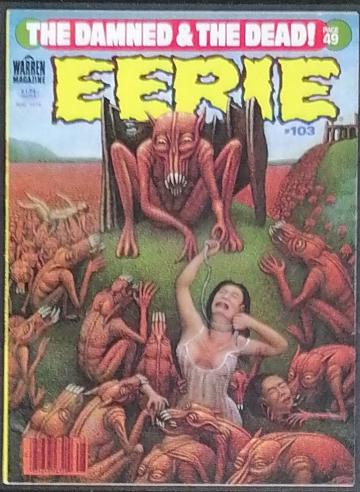

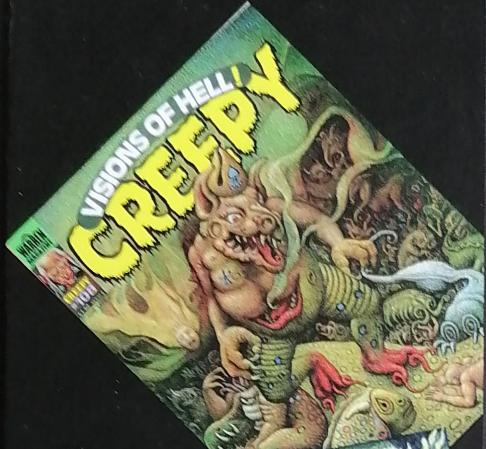

In this exhibit of small works Bienvenido Bones Banez has truly spoken eloquently and strongly in his brilliant and vivid colors about the spirit of the gods, the sublime and the profane, of his origin.

The Terrance Lindall Retrospective

Curated by Yuko Nii

"The best of all
worlds!"

Professor Horace Jeffery Hodges was kind enough to do a transcript of my lecture:

Satan's Peculiar Grace"
Terrance Lindall
WAH Center

A couple of weeks ago, Bienvenido Bones Banez gave an extemporaneous piano recital, "The Satanic Rhapsody," followed by Terrance Lindall expounding, also extemporaneously, on the "peculiar graces" of Satan in extrapolating from Bien's now-famous dictum, that "Satan gives color to the world!"

Bien's statement sounds rather disturbing, initially, but Lindall sets it within the context of the quasi-orthodox position known as the felix culpa, or "fortunate fall." The basic idea is that without Satan's role in bringing about the fall, Christ would never have taken on flesh to take on humankind's sins, but in order for Satan to 'cooperate' with God's aims -- whatever Satan's intentions -- Satan has to be graced by God with certain gifts, Satan's peculiar graces.

Lindall opens with a gambit that plays on Steve Fallon's views about John Milton's peculiar grace, and since the video was finally put up on YouTube, I took the time to transcribe Lindall's extemporaneous talk:

Milton's peculiar grace was the fact that he always wrote about himself so much, and of course he was the great inspiration for truth. He said truth on any battlefield against any foe will prevail.

Now, when Bien came here a few years ago, he inspired me with a saying of his. He said, "Satan gives color to the world." Well, what does that mean exactly? It means that all of the strife and everything in the world inspires poets, writers, artists. If you go to a museum, you'll see a lot of that. If you read a book, books from the sixteenth-century on, it's all about conflict and war, love and hatred, and all these things, competition -- well, that's Satan-inspired.

Can you imagine if this were God's perfect world, if you had everything you wanted, good food, place to rest, no problems, no pain, live forever? You could live as vegetables! Imagine that! So, Satan's peculiar grace is that he has given you something to aspire to, to compete with. He's the adrenaline rush in your blood, and he also gives you great literature talking about the struggles you have, and so that is Satan's peculiar grace. It's a grace given to you by Satan.

Dear BT,

Your "colleague Bienvenido Bones Banez, jr.," is indeed "a mighty Paradise Lost illustrator." I think his gift to the Milton collection in the Yuko Nii Foundation is a grand gift and one I'm certain the Foundation will cherish forever.

You have always mentioned "Bones" to me. Would he do an illustration for me; one that isn't too expensive, but reflective of his profound talent as an illustrator, in particular the "mighty Paradise Lost illustrator" you have labeled him.

I may be all wet on this, but didn't he once talk about doing a portrait of Milton for me?

Warm regards,
BB
